SUMMARY

An ammunition storage area, probably for conventional ammunition, is located 40 kilometers (km) northwest of Volgograd and 5 km northeast of Kotluban (Figure 1). It apparently services the military installations in the Volgograd area.

The fenced installation comprises 530 acres (375 of which are double fenced) and contains 51 ammunition storage buildings, each surrounded by blast walls (Figures 2 and 3). A system of well constructed roads is apparent inside the storage area. The administration or support area covers 165 acres and includes 51 miscellaneous buildings, 2 possible POL tanks, and a water tower.

The installation was covered by [redacted] missions between [redacted]. The only change observed is the construction of blast walls around the ammunition storage buildings. These walls were not visible in [redacted] but were almost complete by [redacted]. The installation appears active on all missions; however, the level of activity cannot be determined.
